

Inman, S.C., July 13.—A watch, lost nine years ago, has been returned to Marvin Jackson of Inman.

When a group was discussing watches here, a man pulled a watch out of his pocket and offered it for inspection. Jackson thought he recognized the timepiece and asked to see it.

The watch was the one given to him by his grandfather and valued as a heirloom. In the back of the watch case was his grandfather's initials.

The man, returning the watch to Jackson, said one of his sons had found the time piece several years ago in the railroad tracks.

ELECTRIC EEL

New York.—The electric eel, one of the exhibits of the New York Zoological Society at the New York World's Fair, is capable of delivering an electrical impulse of 400 volts for 1-1000 of a second or 110 volts for one minute. The eel possesses sufficient electrical energy to electrocute a man and is always handled with rubber gloves.

"When one looks at the type of men attending our International convention, and learns of the accomplishments of the 2,000 clubs throughout the United States and Canada, one may feel proud of his affiliation with Kiwanis.—Syracuse, New York.
