Scouts Don't Beg

It has been reported that some colored boys have been soliciting funds to pay their expenses at the colored Boy Scout Camp. Such practice is against the rules of the Boy Scout organization and friends are requested to please give nothing to such boys. There is no objection to boys working for the money, and a number of friends of Scouting give work for this purpose. Boys who beg for money may not even be connected with the Scout troop and use the name merely to get money. A true Boy Scout will not beg. A Scout works for his camp expenses either at home or for somebody else.

The Bulletin $2 per year anywhere in the United States.
