Huge "Moonshine" Plant Destroyed

Federal and state officers yesterday (Tuesday) announced the capture and destruction late Monday night in Polk county of the largest illegal liquor plant found in Western North Carolina for more than two years.

The plant was found in the Pea Ridge section of Polk county by alcohol tax unit investigators from Asheville, aided by Polk county sheriff's deputies.

Dynamited with the plant were 1,000 gallons of mash and 27 barrels used to contain the sour mixture. The plant consisted of a 60-gallon and an 80 gallon steam still joined together, with a potential capacity of about 400 gallons of whiskey a week. Fourteen sticks of dynamite were used in wrecking the outfit.

The outfit appeared to have been in operation for about 60 days and was ready to run again, officers said, but no arrests were made.—Asheville Citizen.
