New York November 17th,
Dear Mr. Vining:

May I add just a few words to the splendid appeal which Mr. Sewall has issued in behalf of the Red Cross?

I believe that many of us who have not had the rare privilege of working with the Red Cross are apt to picture this as an emergency organization, responding to human woe in time of war or some great disaster. Every day, war or peace, the Red Cross carries on its mission of mercy to those who suffer. Here in the New York Chapter there are twenty-three permanent services—twenty-three ways a person can help. I have been particularly interested in two: the Motor Corps and the Hospital Service. In the Motor Corps we supply our own cars, gasoline, buy our own uniforms, and in return we have the satisfaction of knowing that certain humble folks—too old or too ill or too poor to go alone—have been enabled, through our service, to receive clinical treatment. We have also been meeting the incoming vessels from the war zone, and offering to destitute refugees and strangers transportation and Red Cross kindness.

Hospital Service: In order to qualify for this service, one is required to pass a course called "Home Hygiene and the Care of the Sick", which really amounts to 36 hours of training in the fundamental principles of nursing by a Registered Red Cross Nurse. Red Cross units of trained volunteers are filling a desperate need

CURB REPORTER

This week's State Magazine states that some of the fiddlin' music of John Weaver of Polk county has been made on some records and will be preserved in the Archives of the Library of Congress for the enjoyment of future generations . . . . Oysters tonight at the Tryon First Baptist church. The women of the church are advertising half stews and fries. It is open to the public and will give many Tryonites a chance to enjoy some good food, see the new Sunday school and dining room, and do a further good deed by helping the women raise some money for church work . . . . Christmas advertising is announcing the coming of Santa Claus . . . . Over 100 young people met at the Stearns gymnasium on Wednesday night and enjoyed folk games under direction of W. P. Jackson. That was one time the majority was playing and the minority was looking on. The games were recreational in every way, physical and mental and promise to open an avenue of wholesome entertainment for young people all over the county. Columbus, Green Creek and Tryon were represented on Wednesday . . . The U. S. Post Office has notified R. L. Wilson, Tryon Route One mail carrier that he isn't as old as he thought he was, and that he will
