James Arledge

James Arledge, 63, resident of the White Oak township of Polk County, died at his home Saturday night following a two-day illness.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon at the Silver Creek Baptist church, of which he was a member, by the Rev. Robert Early, the Rev. M. J. Long and the Rev. H. M. Hester. Interment was in the church cemetery.

Surviving are three sons, Harley Arledge, Jonathan Arledge and Martin Arledge, all of Mill Spring; three daughters, Mrs. Nellie Edwards, Miss Ethel Arledge and Mrs. Johnnie Crain, also all of Mill Spring; one half-brother, Whittler Arledge of Tryon, N. C.; and a half-sister, Mrs. Nora Hipp of Saluda, N. C.

DuBose Heyward

DuBose Heyward, 56, widely known Southern author, died of a heart attack at the hospital here Sunday afternoon.

Heyward came to Tryon Sunday from his summer residence in Hendersonville to take a treatment at the hospital here. He was on his way back to Hendersonville when he was stricken and was brought back here, where he died soon afterward.

The body was taken to Charleston, S. C., Heyward's native home, for funeral services and burial. Rites will be held there at St. Philips' church Tuesday.

Surviving DuBose Heyward besides his wife, herself a playwright who collaborated with him in the dramatizing of "Porgy" and in other works, are a daughter, Jennifer DuBose Heyward, 10, and a sister, Mrs. Jennie Haskell, of Summerville.

Best known for "Porgy," which was a successful novel, play and opera, the latter with music by George Gershwin, DuBose Heyward was Charleston's foremost literary man of his generation.

He was born in Charleston, the son of an aristocratic family whose forebears were signers of the Declaration of Independence.

When he was two years old, his father died in an accident. He was the only man of the household of four, including his grandmother; his mother, Mrs. Jane Screven DuBose, who died about two years ago; a younger sister and himself.

Rev. J. A. Brock of Spindale is conducting revival services this week at the Tryon Second Baptist church. Services start each night at 7:30. Public invited.
