

Heavy rains has again flooded the mountain section around Asheville. Marshall was the hardest hit. The French Broad river rose six feet into the city streets, washed away a two story building, tore up the railroad track, disrupted the telephone and telegraph lines. Six or more persons are missing. Waynesville depot, one of the highest in altitude on the Southern railway, was in three feet of water. 600 Waynesville people were driven from their homes by the rising water. Four feet of water flowed through the main street of Canton. The Enka company estimates $500,000 damage to their property.
