Recommended By Defense Committee

In a recent statement of policy issued by National Headquarters of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, we read the following:

"1. Aid to the Allies and American defense, which are parts of the same problem, can only be accomplished by very greatly increased American arms production. The battle for civilization and democracy may be won or lost on the American assembly line. To this end we will support the President in the use of his full legal powers under a state of national emergency if necessary, to mobilize at once all the industrial resources of the nation for maximum production. Whatever executive authority of the President must be used; whatever additional authority from Congress must be secured—all of these should be mobilized for tremendous industrial production for supplying ourselves and the allies."

This committee has opportunities for fact finding that none of us possess. Can we do better than to follow their leadership? They are not swayed by sectionalism or hysteria. The measures they have advocated have proved beneficial to the cause we are all fighting for. Let us support them. —E. G. C.
