Wild Flowers Now Under State Protection

A recent statement received from Mr. Carroll Rogers, chairman of the Committee on Conservation and Development in the General Assembly, calls attention to the fact that the dogwood, now our State Flower, is on the list of wild plants under the special protection of the new state law.

This is "dogwood time"; the woods are lovely with its sudden full bloom, but though it looks plentiful, let us not be wasteful of what is rightfully ours, and, more to the point, let us be careful not to trespass on property that is NOT OURS. If we do we are breakers of the law and subject to its penalties.

This law, passed during the recent session of the Legislature, reads as follows:

"An act for the Preservation and Conservation of Wild Flowers.

"Section 1. No person, firm or corporation shall dig up, pull up, or take from the land of another, or from any PUBLIC DOMAIN, the whole or any part of any trailing arbutus, American Holly, white pine, red cedar, hemlock or other coniferous trees, or any FLOWERING DOGWOOD, or any mountain laurel, or rhododendron, or any ground pine or Christmas greens, or any Judas trees, or any leucothoe or any azalea, without having in his possession a permit to dig up, pull up, or take such plants signed by the owner of such land, or by his duly authorized agent.
