Man Visits Tryon to Help Save $725,000

J. R. Spratt of Asheville, State Forestry service, was in Polk County on Tuesday stimulating interest in the conservation of North Carolina's forests and protecting them from fire hazards.
Gov. J. Melville Broughton has named this week as "Forest Protection Week."

Mr. Spratt, who came to Tryon to confer with Carroll P. Rogers, member of the State Conservation and Development Board, stated that North Carolina is the largest lumber producing state in the South and that approximately two-thirds of the state's area 18,- 000,000 acres, is in timberland, and that the pay roll amounts to millions of dollars yearly. Mr.
Pratt said that Polk County's timber area was probably more than two-thirds of the county's area.

In a letter from Raleigh, Paul Kelly, assistant state director of the conservation and development board, said, "During the current week we are endeavoring to call the attention of the public through every practical medium to the critical situation with regard to forest fires, which will probably not be alleviated until long, drenching rains are had throughout the State."

As evidence of how inflammable forests are now, the Tryon Fire Department was called out Saturday noon to extinguish burning green honeysuckle vines on the Oak Hall bank near the Rock House Art Gallery. The fire was
