ple do with the three hundred thousand acres of land. The progress will be, up or down, depending upon the proper use of this land.

Business men may say that we need more industries. This might be good if properly adjusted, but as it is now, the most industrious boys and girls leave the farms never to return except during depressions, sickness and old age. What we need in Polk County is a better appreciation for "Dirt" and how to use it.

Jane Bingham (Mrs. Samuel A., Jr.) shared honors as the feminine lead in the "Male Animal" presented last week at the Community Playhouse in Nashville, Tenn. An attractive picture of Mrs. Bingham also appeared in the Nashville Banner in connection with the play. The talented newcomer to Nashville received her dramatic training at Vassar, from which she was graduated in 1937. In The Male Animal she played the part of the lovely, vivacious young wife who loves fun and excitement, but who in the end finds that her husband's impractical idealism holds her heart.
