State College Farm Questions Answered

QUESTION: What are some of the important things to remember in marketing eggs?

ANSWER: Never put the eggs in cases until they are properly cooled. When warm eggs are put in cases, they can't cool rapidly. So, they begin to lose quality and may even become bad. The way eggs are marketed also affects their quality and the number lost through soilage. Eggs need to be marketed often. And once a week isn't often enough. Twice a week isn't often enough in hot weather. For satisfactory results, eggs need to be marketed just as soon as possible after they are gathered and cooled. One other point, the eggs must be protected from heat while on the way to market. If the eggs or containers in which they are packed are exposed to the sun or heat from other sources they will lose quality. Loss of quality means loss of market value.

Youth Drowns While Fishing

George W. Taylor, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Taylor of Lynn, was drowned in Lake Adger on Saturday night. Young Taylor, who accompanied his father and a party on a fishing trip to the lake, was with them in a boat and became unbalanced falling into the water. It was stated that when the lad fell overboard, the oars of the boat were also thrown some distance, and those in it were unable to get the boat to a point to be able to save him.

Boy Scouts from Tryon were taken to the scene and, after several hours, they succeeded in getting the body by aid of grappling hooks. It was in about 15 feet of water.

Funeral services at the Pacolet Baptist church in Lynn Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with Rev. B. G. Henry officiating. Burial in Friendship cemetery near Saluda. The youth is survived by his parents, two sisters, Mary and Kathleen, and two brothers, Larry and John Kenneth Taylor. Pallbearers: Ned Fisher, Ray Foster, Clarence Scoggins, Ray Blackwell, Hanford Rhodes and Leroy Fisher.
