George A. Cathey Named By Gov. Broughton to Help Reemployment Problem

Governor J. Melville Broughton has appointed George A. Cathey of Tryon as Reemployment Committeeman for the Polk County Selective Service Board and is authorized to execute all the functions pertaining to this office which seeks to reestablish the men discharged from army service and help them secure employment.

Ends Sunday Night

Raleigh, Sept. 23. — Governor Broughton asserted today that if North Carolina goes on a daylight saving time basis next summer, it should do so as part of a daylight saving time measure "on a national basis."

The Governor made the assertion in announcing a shift in the changing from daylight saving to Eastern Standard time from midnight, September 23 to 2 a. m., Sunday, September 23rd.

The shift was made, the Governor explained, "in order to avoid radio complications and in keeping with the action in adjoining states."

"Accordingly, as of 2 o'clock a. m., on Sunday, September 23, the people of North Carolina will be requested to return to Eastern Standard time by the process of turning back the clock one hour," Broughton added.

North Carolina went on daylight saving time on August 1 at the Governor's request following a request by President Roosevelt that southeastern states should adopt the daylight time as a means of saving electricity for the national defense program.
