A note on my typewriter from Major Sharp says: "Please run a small ad to the effect that there ought to be more old magazines and books lying around that might be placed in schools, etc., in the county. Also suggest delivering to your office." So there is the ad. If readers of books and magazines are willing to save them when they are through with them and bring them to The Bulletin office for distribution to reading hungry people who can't afford to buy them; and if Major Sharp is willing to see that the magazines and books are distributed to these people, the Bulletin is glad to run a free notice about it and to furnish a place to keep them until the Major calls for them Robert T. (From Clifton Fadiman)

To the Editor:

As the Christmas season nears, we shall hear again over the air and in the air all the sweet carols which have come to us from Britain; we will listen to the story of Bob Cratchitt and Tiny Tim, and the re-generation of Mr. Ebenezer Scrooge. All the British customs which we have adopted here in celebration of Christmas — the Yule Log, the boar's head, peaceful hearths and happy laughter — all of these fine old British traditions will make us think even more unhappily of Christmas in Britain this year. Of the thousands of little British boys and girls, bombed out of their homes, living among strangers in emergency billets, with no prospect of anything like a Merry Christmas.

We in America, if we act at once, can give these homeless British youngsters the happy Christmas which they do not now expect. The British War Relief Society, 730 Fifth Avenue, New York, is appealing for gifts to send packages of American toys and sweets on a ship leaving New York harbor before November 1st. A contribution of $1 will buy a Christmas parcel for one British child. This is a magnificent opportunity for lovers of children to be generous in the immemorial spirit of Christmas, a real chance to send your personal greeting to Tiny Tim in his bleak little billet. Donations may be left at the Tryon office of the British War Relief Society.
