Foods In Wide Variety Planned For Guild Sale

What the shopper may expect to find at the food sale to be held by the ladies of St. Agnes Guild in the Parish House, Saturday, April 18th, beginning at 9 a. m., may now be revealed, since the plans of the Guild committee have been perfected and the experienced cooks among the membership have indicated the types of food they will supply.

The list in detail would be too long, so only a summary is given here. From this the capable household quartermaster—can lay out menus that will gain the family's everlasting gratitude.

Briefly, then, there will be many kinds of breads, plain and fancy. And, remember, everything is home baked from recipes hallowed by long usage and by years of satisfactory eating.

There will be rolls in great variety, sweet buns, cinnamon buns, etc. Coffee cakes and cookies. Fancy cakes entrancing to look upon, and, we fear, far too flattering to the taste for these parlous days when they tell us that every cake is likely to be the last one. Anyway, for a last fling perhaps, they will be at the food sale.

And there will be pies, as good as any you have had, and probably better.

On the savory side will be a famous concoction of pot cheese with chives, and cheese straws that have an immense local reputation. Potato salad that is rated far above the usual range of this plebeian dish. You might say, pota-
