FARMERS! Important Winter Corn Tour May 21st

Are you interested in a crop which will grow in the winter time to take the place of corn? Barley is called winter corn. Many are using barley in the place of corn.

A trip to study barley experiments at Statesville Experiment Station is being planned for May 21st. As much as 85 bushels per acre is being grown there with some of the new varieties.

Experimental work with new varieties of wheat and oats will be studied. If you have not been to see this extensive work in small grain you should not miss this tour.

Dr. G. K. Middleton, who is in charge of this work will explain the different plots; varieties and treatment. You will see things you never thought existed in the small grain field.

Last year two or three carloads went from Polk County and five or six ordered some of the leading strains of oats and barley. One farmer has thirty acres of the new Harded Barley sown this year and another has six bushels of each.

Farmers who wish to make the trip should get in a reservation at once with the County Agent. Two or three cars may be available if farmers chip in on expenses. The first to come will be the ones who will get the seats in the cars. The party will leave the courthouse at 10 o'clock Thursday morning, May 21. Don't wait or you will be too late.

Russell Durham has joined the U. S. Army Air Corps at Fort Jackson.

Dr. Sewall, Baccalaureate Speaker For Tryon High School

Superintendent M. B. Caldwell, has announced that Dr. Chas. G. Sewall of Tryon and Christmas Cove, Maine, will preach the baccalaureate sermon for the Tryon commencement exercises. The service will be held Sunday night, May 24th, at Tryon school auditorium. All the ministers of the community will have a part on the program as customary. On May 29th, commencement address will be delivered by Editor Paul O. Nafe, editor of Marion, N. C., formerly one of the editors of the Christian Science Monitor and recently elected president of the Western North Carolina Press association.

WEST MADE WARDEN

Chairman Chas. J. Lynch of the Polk County Defense Council, today made public his appointment of Charles C. West as chief air raid warden for Tryon. Mr. West is charged with the specific duty of organizing, coordinating and directing such wardens, auxiliary squads and fire watchers as recommended by the director of the Citizens Defense Corps and Chairman of the Polk County Defense Council.

Mayor Missildine and Chairman Lynch urge all public officials and private citizens to render the chief air raid warden full cooperation, aid and good will in his discharge of duties as such. Warden West requests all citizens who are willing to volunteer for any of the duties mentioned in the above
