CLAIMS RECORD FOR VEGETABLE FREAK

Edwin "Sam" Wilson of Lynn, in growing his Victory Garden, lays claim to having produced the most extraordinary plants in the county.

Mr. Wilson went to his garden to dig some potatoes, and upon examination of the plants, found that they were producing tomatoes also. He carefully examined one of the tomatoes growing on the potato plants and found them to be normally fruited.

Old-time farmers were astonished at the sight of such a vegetable.

The Lynn gardener was asked if he had attempted to graft the plants, and he replied: "There is not a tomato plant in several hundred yards of the potato patch. As for grafting, well I don't know the first step."

One housewife in the section, opined that: "Complete soup stock is growing in the one vegetable."

A patriotic gardener drawled, "Since Victory Gardens are the order of the day, and full production expected of the industries, the plants have decided to do overtime work for the war effort."

Anyway, the fact above proves something beyond a doubt.
