CURB REPORTER

Weather Wednesday: 95 hot; 75 low The gasoline storage tank explosion Tuesday morning in Wawnesville which killed four people and wounded five, has claimed its fifth victim. W. L. Hardin, Jr., the manager of the Standard Oil Co., there who did heroic work in staying too close to the tanks to warn others away, died of his wounds on Wednesday. He was a son of the secretary to Congressman Zeb Weaver and for eight years was bookkeeper for Dicus Bros. Construction Co., formerly of Polk County Polk County Rationing Board needs funds for expenses. If you can't volunteer personal services, a small donation will help. Visit the Rationing Board and see the people at work. If we can't give our time we should give some of our money to help Sgt. William H. Aiken, Jr., of Camp Sutton, writes: "The generosity and hospitality of all you Tryonites is amazing, never before have I seen such congeniality and hospitality as I found with everybody with whom I came in contact. I thoroughly enjoyed the afternoon and evening at the Parish House, and found the supper very delightful." Germans continue their drive in Russia but are being checked in North Africa. . . .
