

5c PER COPY

$2.00 PER YEAR

ENTERED AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER AUGUST 20, 1928, AT THE POSTOFFICE
AT TRYON, N. C. UNDER THE ACT OF CONGRESS, MARCH 3, 1879

THE TRYON DAILY BULLETIN

The World's Smallest Daily Newspaper, Seth M. Vining, Editor.

Vol. 15. Est. 1-31-28

TRYON, N. C., TUESDAY, SEPT. 8, 1942

CURB REPORTER

Weather Monday: High 80, low 65; rain 2.45 The Raleigh News and Observer prints a picture and story about Clarence L. Davenport, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. D. Davenport of Tryon being commissioned an ensign in the Navy to serve as cost inspector. Ensign Davenport is a graduate of Tryon high school and of the University of South Carolina, and for the past four years has been secretary and treasurer of the Dr. Pepper Bottling Co., in Raleigh. He married Mabel Williams of Alberta, Va., and Raleigh. He will be stationed at Mt. Pleasant, W. Va. . . . New Bulletin subscription entered for Willard Brady at Clemson college, Jim C. Jackson at the Citadel, Charleston, Miss Arpha Burrell at Lowell, N. C., Miss Hope Schilleter at University of North Carolina College for Women, Greensboro, and a renewal for Mrs. W. A. Schilleter at Columbia, S. C. The Raleigh post office reports that C. L. Davenport is at Gallipolis, Ohio. . . . The Chas. M. Turners and their "Cute" little boy, Charlie Mack, are leaving Polk County for Reidsville where Mr. Turner takes over the management of his father's dairy as the result of another brother being drafted. Jerre Mathis, Jr., of Stokes county succeeds Mr. Turn-

-----Continued on Back Page-----

LANIER ANNIVERSARY

An Editorial From The Charlotte Observer.

It was 61 years ago yesterday, at the village of Lynn in the mountains of North Carolina, that death brought an end to Sidney Lanier's long years of physical and economic afflictions that stemmed from his hard experiences as a youth in the Confederate army and in a war prison.

But death could not destroy what he had wrought, the poetry that flowed from the brain and soul of the lover of art and music and of all things beautiful in humankind and in nature.

His name and fame are greater and more widespread today than on the September day in 1881, when at the early age of 39 he was called from the South he had loved and served to the land of eternal freedom from physical frailties and material wants.

Because his name and fame still are alive and will continue long to live and because of his high rank as a poet of the South, the land where he was born and died and where he spent his achieving life, the Daughters of the Confederacy are earnestly seeking a place for him in the Hall of Fame.

That cause has been a major part of the program of the U. D. C. during 1942, which marks the 100th anniversary of Lanier's birth, in Macon, Ga. The cause merits their effort and their undertaking deserves to be rewarded with success.

Old or new copies of The Tryon Daily Bulletin for sale at 5c each.