There's a light shining just around the corner of the week, and it will soon be shining here. The Christmas light. The light in the eyes of a child on Christmas morning, as it fondly holds a longed for toy. The gleam of a star on a Christmas tree, a little sprawling pine, a soft cedar or a magnificent spruce. A candle burning in a window, a tiny cabin window tucked back in the hills or a window in a city mansion. The chuckling light of a Yule log as cheerful glowing coals fall and start a new blaze. And yes, Christmas is a love, the love of a Father for his wayward children as expressed in the Babe of Bethlehem. And Christmas is a life, a tiny bit of His life spilling into our own and making us a bit kinder and finer. The enslavers of mankind hate Christmas because they hate Him, but they can't take it from us. That is what we are fighting for, to make the world safe for decent things like Christmas.
