TRYON, N. C., THURSDAY, NOV. 22ND, 1945

This is the biggest Thanksgiving edition of The Bulletin. Everyone feels so thankful that there is a desire in nearly every person to do something constructive. There is a growing impatience at so much inertia. Business men are eager to make things grow, to build and expand in order to give better service. Many workers are after better jobs in order to provide security and happiness for the future. Let us be thankful for this hunger or yearning. It makes progress for a better person, a happier home, a more useful community. Let us be thankful for all blessings, present and past, and for the opportunities to do something in the future. This is a great country in natural resources, but is even richer in the spirit we have inherited from our forefathers. Help that spirit to manifest itself in every way possible.
