TRYON, N. C., FRIDAY, NOV. 8TH, 1946

Weather Thursday: High 69, low 44, rain .05 . . . One of the nicest meetings of the Lanier Club was held Thursday afternoon when Reuben Robertson, executive head of the Champion Paper and Fibre Co. spoke on current problems in industry. The library was filled to standing room only. A large number of business men were present and joined the ladies in asking questions about current problems in the nation. Mr. Robertson was called to Washington by President Roosevelt to serve on a national board representing industry and labor to help prepare the nation for increased production necessary to win the war. He told of the efforts in Washington to build a working force that would put patriotism above self. This produced the no strike pledge during the war. In spite of mistakes made he was high in praise of the business men who were amateurs at making war, and was surprised that more mistakes were not made. He gave an interesting character sketch of John L. Lewis, who he classified as the most able labor leader, a skillful strategist who won his battles against the government because he planned ahead
