TRYON, N. C., WEDNESDAY, DEC. 4, 1946

Weather Tuesday: High 41, low 17 . . . John L. Lewis is "guilty", says Federal court in Washington. Several million people out of jobs now as result of coal strike. Ford Motor Company plants shut down. . . . O. Max Gardner of Shelby who came to Columbus, N. C., about 18 years ago to make a speech soliciting votes to be governor of North Carolina, got elected with the help of Polk County's votes and became one of North Carolina's great governors. He served during the beginning of the depression and started the state on a program to look out for its own needs, and its resources; to grow more, produce more, and give more jobs to more people. Even the Republicans said he made a good governor. He became recognized as an outstanding business leader. He has been serving as undersecretary of the treasury. Now he is the new American Ambassador to Great Britain where he will "talk with kings"—if that means anything. Anyway, America will be well-represented by an intelligent man who knows the needs of the everyday fellow as well as the scheming of political and financial manipulators. . . .
