TRYON CHORAL CLUB

The Tryon Choral Club is composed of about 60 Tryonites, both old and young, who enjoy singing. We hope to interest others in a membership for the Spring concert. No dues and very little previous training are required, as Dr. R. A. Laslett Smith has kindly offered his services free.

We hope you will come to the concert Monday, December 16th, at the modest admission fee of 60c and spend an enjoyable evening. Any profits made from these concerts will be spent to promote music in this town for those who could not otherwise afford it.—Contributed.

REMINISCENCES

(By Miss Helen A. Carver)

The large house had many rooms which in winter were filled with paying guests. Incidentally, I note that each room had a trash-burner stove. Each morning, an attendant started a fire and put on a receptacle for hot water. A half-century ago, that was considered the acme of comfort in Tryon!

Mrs. Ferris did not limit her guests to her own preferences in diet, giving them, instead, a generous table. Although she was much respected by them, they were rather gratified when some minor ill kept her in her room and "Charles", without comment, helped himself to some of the normal food he was serving the others.

If I could sketch from memory, I should like to have the Ferrises roll off my page in their own carriage, a closed, coupe-like vehicle unlike anything else on wheels ever seen in Tryon. The driver sat very high in front, with the owners, out to take the fresh air in winter, snugly tucked in back of him with all the robes and shawls an Arctic Winter might have demanded. At one window appeared the face of Mr. Ferris, with his gray sideburns and at the other, the surprisingly-modern, fine face of Mrs. Ferris framed by mid-Victorian curls.
