Editor Tryon Bulletin:

With no thought of starting a controversy, may I suggest to the city council, or to the proper authority, that beginning with the first plane, or sycamore tree at the lower end of Chestnut Street all trees on the right except the maples be removed. All of the planes, except the first, are irregular, or somewhat dwarfed and they are short lived. Because of dominating trees on private property, even the maples, if left alone will have difficulty reaching maturity, but now their struggle for existence is hopeless.

Even for the good sycamore at the foot of the street there are compensating trees on either side of the street and that one good one is one too many. Let us sacrifice some of the trees now for the sake of a better street three to five years hence.—Contributed.

The Davis apple orchard at Saluda, N. C., is out on the road from Saluda to Greenville, about 3 miles, and is probably the best cared for orchard in that region. Mr. Davis tells me he has the best crop he has had in years, but "the most expensive". That's the orchard that had apples 2 years ago when no other orchard up there had a crop. My friend, Mr. J. A. Tillinghast, once owned the orchard just beyond. Mr. Davis bought what was known as the "Bailey" orchard from Jesse Boyd and Ben Hill Brown, and after he bought it realized there was no water on it and he had an interesting time finding water, by sinking wells.—C.
