CURB REPORTER

Weather Thursday: High 50, low 20. . . . Federal Housing Administrator Foley says U. S. needs 18,000,000 houses. Reading the front pages of big newspapers makes one feel that he is reading the same matter that has been colored with adjectives and insinuations to make much ado about nothing and to excite the reader's interest. In the meantime so many vital things are being neglected in home communities all over America. Schools, streets, parks, public services and numerous things need to be improved. Child labor laws have taken young people from jobs that teach a trade and have not replaced the loss with vocational training in high schools, consequently most of our young people are growing up with no skills and only book learning. They grow up and are ready to be married without the ability to make a living or to stand on their own feet. One hope a young boy has of learning something about various occupations is to join the Boy Scouts where he is taught over 21 different subjects before he becomes an Eagle Scout. He is guided by the best experts in the community. For first aid, he must pass a test before a doctor, for firemanship before a member of the fire department, carpentry, electricity, mechanics, cooking, safety, and any of the other trades before a person qualified for the occupation. Let's make America strong at home. On Sunday Scoutmaster C. W. McCall and his Tryon Scouts will attend the Presbyterian church in a body to open National Scout Week in Tryon.
