ganization. A faithful choir member, chairman of the church board of trustees, author of religious papers, lecturer in religious schools, supply pastor for numerous churches of different denominations he gave himself where he was needed most. He has directed Red Cross drives, headed Council of Social Agencies and during the war helped to promote recreation for service men visiting in the community. In 1935 when the depression was about to close St. Luke's Hospital he was called in to head a drive for funds from everybody in order to keep the hospital going. His executive ability in marshalling the forces of the community to aid the hospital made him the ideal successor for the first vacancy on the hospital board. His continued interest and work made him the unanimous choice for president when that office became vacant. Were it possible to record the appreciation in the hearts of the many who have benefitted from his work we could award him a medal for distinguished service that would be the envy of all men.
