Editor The Bulletin:

I noted your article in Thursday's Bulletin on the parking situation in Tryon and the possibility of meters to correct the situation.

I am strongly opposed to meters. Tryon has always been known as a "Friendly" town and meters certainly do not enhance such a reputation. Nor do meters seem to help the parking situation in any town I know where they are installed. Unless their revenue is badly needed they should be passed up for the present.

As an alternative I propose the following:

Let the police, or a committee appointed by the mayor, interview each store owner and find the number of employees he has who need parking space during the day. Then a search for parking places off Trade Street should be made and sufficient found to satisfy these needs. Signs should be painted with the store's name and put at the selected parking places and the employees required to park in them. Enforcement of this policy will, I believe, remedy our parking situation for some time.

Grain combines should be put in good working order before they are taken to the field say agricultural engineers at State College.
