

MUSIC AT FAIR

Good music and entertainment will mark the Grandstand offering at the 6th Annual Piedmont Interstate Fair, which opens on Oct. 8, at Spartanburg.

In selecting musical entertainment, the management chose Joe Basile's Band, because of their enviable reputation as being America's leading musical organization, devoting their summer months exclusively to Fairs and Expositions.

In addition to the concert ensemble, which embraces popular music, as well as the more serious minded offerings, the Band consists of talented musicians well versed in all types of music.

Basile has played for many years at the Madison Square Garden in New York City, having played there at the time when it was only a small two by four building and running straight through into the grand new structure known all over the world.

Basile's fame is also known over the air, as during the winter of 1933, he performed for both NBC and CBS on the "Circus Days" program, which was a huge success.

Due to his liberal offerings of both popular and semi-classical music, Basile enjoys an enviable reputation among Eastern Fairs and Expositions. He is an expert showman and musician, combining perfect synchronization of music for the various acts and features which his concert numbers.

Basile's Band has been the featured band on the Big Top TV Circus Show for several years, and has just recently had his option renewed for several more years.
