WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 26, 1951

There are two double page advertisements in today's Bulletin regarding the liquor store election. One ad is advocating establishment of such a store and the other ad opposes the store. This is called to the readers' attention that he may read both ads in helping the voter to determine which stand he wants to take . . . The Tryon Parent-Teachers Association is sponsoring a square dance and variety program for Trade Street one night next week. It may be Wednesday. Girls and boys and old folks may want to make a date for the event . . . The Spartanburg Herald of today reports a legal battle about some property in Tryon. The news in part is as follows:

Jury trials will get started today in Common Pleas Court with the three-week docket's biggest case—in which the widow of Dr. Hugh Black seeks to set aside her husband's will.

The will disposes of an estate officially appraised at more than $500,000.

It leaves to Mrs. Darthey I. Black, the widow, the home on Palmetto Street, two pieces of property on E. Valley Street, reportedly including 14 houses, plus $500 monthly or one fourth of the income from shares in a realty com-
