SCOGGINS A B C OFFICER

Tryon Police Officer Claud Scoggins has been employed as Tryon's first ABC Chief Law Enforcement Officer, according to an announcement by R. E. Brantley, chairman of the Tryon Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

Chief Scoggins has been a law enforcement officer for nearly 25 years, having served as deputy sheriff, policeman and police chief, and as jailor for Polk County.

WILLIS E. KUHN HEADS RIDING & HUNT CLUB

Willis E. Kuhn, Indianapolis, Ind., automotive businessman and sportsman, who has a home in Tryon, was elected President of the Tryon Riding & Hunt Club at its annual meeting Monday night at Oak Hall hotel.

Mr. Kuhn, who succeeds Austin A. Brown, has just completed a three years' term on the board of directors of the club where he served as chairman of public relations.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Kuhn have been regular riders here during the season since their purchase of the Cotton Patch, Hunting Country Estate of the late James H. Perkins of New York, former head of the National City Bank.

Mr. and Mrs. Kuhn own Folly Farms and Stables, a large country estate near Indianapolis. Their horses have won many top honors in shows throughout the nation. The Kuhns have their own private plane and fly back and forth between their homes in Indiana and North Carolina in a few hours. They will be in Florida until the middle of February.

At the meeting Monday two new directors were elected to fill the expired terms made vacant by Mr. Kuhn and Dr. Austin Woody. They are James G. Ferguson, Chicago publisher and Doubleday representative who built a home here on Hearthstone Ridge and James Waller Marshall Jr., formerly of Winnetka, Ill., a part time resident of Tryon for about 15 years until his graduation from Brown University last year when he accepted a position with the Hatch Mill and made his permanent home
