Vol. 24—No. 350 TRYON, N. C., WEDNESDAY, JAN. 23RD, 1952

Weather Tuesday: High 51, low 35, rain 1.18, Rel. Hum. 90 . . . Air plane flying through fog, Buffalo to Newark crashed into an Elizabeth, N. J., apartment house Tuesday, exploded; 23 persons dead including former Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson . . . Governor Scott boosting Hubert E. Olive for governor this year . . . The permanent remote control connection with Spartanburg's WSPA radio station via Pierce-Wilson Motor Co., in Tryon puts this community in contact with the radio listeners throughout the world if necessary. If something of great moment were to develop here the entire world could listen in on short notice if desired. The initial broadcast will be held Thursday from 12:30 to 1 p. m. After this the broadcast will be on Wednesdays at 12:30. People in Ballew's Grocery can turn on the radio and listen while looking through the window at what's taking place across the street . . . Tryon is growing. For a long time Greenville had only remote control from Spartanburg. Now she has her own stations. Who knows? Graves Taylor already has an amateur station on Skyuka Mountain . . . Charlotte Observer lists Helen C. Brundage, John M. Guilbert of Tryon
