Cleaning Pacolet River

The stream pollution project in Pacolet River Valley being conducted by the District Health Department has shown much progress since its beginning last May, 1952.

The cooperation from residents of this section has been excellent. Only in three instances has the sanitarian been confronted with difficulties in attempting to have people remove their sewer outfall from the river.

Smooth sailing, however, has not been a persistent factor. Technical problems involving large commercial establishments have had to be worked out. Residential sections served by a 50 year-old sewer system have been encountered. Private homes located in areas the topography of which make it practically impossible to install a
