HOSPITAL REPORT

We desire to report to friends of St. Luke's Hospital on the progress and status of the building program for the new wing. It is natural that you have wondered why the new building is not in process of construction.

Actually, building a hospital wing costing many thousands of dollars is quite similar to your own problems in building these days. The hospital board began working on plans last December when the project was cleared through the Medical Care Commission of North Carolina. First, the architects were selected . . . . the Six Associates, of Asheville, experienced in hospital construction. Preliminary plans were drawn in keeping with out local needs. In fact six sets of plans were drawn in the interests of getting the greatest possible value from the building dollar and at the same time giving patients and workers maximum possible comfort and space. Finally, plan No. 7 was approved and passed on to the Medical Care Board and to the federal government for their approval. This was done in July.

The Medical Care Commission accepted the major features of the plan but ordered 47 changes. The plans were then re-drawn.

The final working drawings should be completed soon and final specifications drawn. Then one month will be allowed for contractors to prepare bids and for the Medical Care Commission and the St. Luke's Board to study proposals. Following approval of the
