

UNC Seeks Sports Guides For New Library Project

Chapel Hill, N. C.—Any old sports guides (rule books) around your house? If so, and if they've outworn their usefulness to you and you can spare them, they would be mighty welcome in the University of North Carolina's new sports library.

Dr. Wm. H. Peacock of the Department of Physical Education has sent out a call for such books and asks that persons with such books and willing to part with them to communicate with him. Dr. Peacock currently is especially interested in the football, basketball, track and baseball guides that are out of print.

Carl Snacely, former N. C. head football coach, is directing the sports library project, with Peacock and others assisting.—University News Bureau.
