To help solve storage of clothing, bedding, linens, and canned foods, try these suggestions from extension home management specialist Mamie N. Whisnant:

Have hanging rods, hooks and shelf space in closet, and shoe rack or shoe bag on door. Avoid crowding clothes on hangers—saves extra pressing. Keep clothes mended, cleaned and pressed. Label boxes and garment bags. It saves opening "wrong one" later to get what you want. Use drawers or boxes with partitions for handkerchiefs, hose, gloves, etc. You can make these.

Store linens and bedding in or near room where they are used. Label and stack bed linens according to size and quality—single bed in one stack, double bed sheets in another; muslin sheets in one stack, percale in another, etc.

Follow your canning budget and can only what you need. Canning more than your budget wastes time and energy, takes unnecessary storage space and means a lot of old left-overs, much of which may spoil if not used in several years.

Store canned foods in or near kitchen if at all possible. It is a great time and energy saver. Carry in at least a week's supply in one trip, if stored out of the kitchen. Group and label canned foods according to kind and arrange an emergency shelf for unexpected guests.
