The New York Times a few days ago reported the death of Mrs. Robert Worth Bingham, widow of the former ambassador to Great Britain, who spent a number of winter seasons in Tryon where she occupied the Flynn's Little Orchard and later the Samuel Abernathy house in the Hunting Country. She was a leader in social and philanthropic activities. She is survived by her step-son, Barry Bingham, publisher of the Louisville, Ky., Courier-Journal and The Times. He was on a trip to the Pacific with former Governor Adlai Stevenson when Mrs. Bingham passed away.
