

William Hazlett Upson Here

Mr. and Mrs. William Hazlett Upson and daughter, Miss Polly Wright Upson, who have been on a tour of South America have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Paul C. Smith in Gillette Woods the past few days. Miss Upson left Thursday for their home in Middlebury, Vermont. Mr. and Mrs. Upson will remain until Saturday.

Mr. Upson is the noted writer of the Earthworm Tractor stories that have appeared in the Saturday Evening Post since 1924. His character, Alexander Botts, has become quite famous to millions of readers. The stories became so famous that a movie was made in 1936 based on them; starring Joe E. Brown as Botts.

Mr. Upson was with the Caterpillar Tractor Co., of Peoria, Ill., for several years and Mr. Smith who is now the southeastern representative of the company has been with them for nearly 25 years and was on the advisory staff that directed the production of the Earthworm Tractor motion picture.

Mr. Upson is a graduate of Cornell, a veteran of World War I and the author of a number of books.
