What Will Your Children Remember About Home?

Each of us hates to think about our children growing up and leaving home, but as long as our children are living at home, we should try to make their living as pleasant and harmonious as possible.

"Just what will our children remember about home when they leave?" asks Corinne J. Grimsley, N. C. extension specialist in family relations.

"Will they remember helping to plan the work that needed to be done? Will they remember that we often confided in them and asked their advice on family matters? Or will they remember that they weren't actually a contributing member of the family—decisions were made without their participation?"

"What will your children remember about the good times they've had at home?" continues Mrs. Grimsley. "Will Thanksgiving and Christmas bring memories of family reunions and good times together? Will they remember mealtime as a happy time when the whole family sat down together? Or will they remember it as a run-and-go affair?"

"What will they remember about family worship? Will they remember that the blessing was always asked before meals? And will they think of Sunday when the whole family went to church and worshipped together? Is Sunday a kind of 'family day' to them?"

"What will your children remember about you? Will they remember that you praised them for the things they did well and thanked them for their help? Will they remember that when they were discouraged that they could turn to you for encouragement?"

Ruth Current Says:

Window cleaning may be well done by using paper instead of a cloth. It's economical too. Choose soft paper that does not lint. Should one prefer a cloth, choose a clean one free from lint. Chamois is a good cleaner but expensive and requires good care if kept soft.

Various cleaning mixtures may be used: clear water with a little dissolved washing soda—about 1 tablespoon to a pail of water. On a very cold day the cloth may be moistened with alcohol or good kerosene—the latter is a very efficient cleaner and is not expensive. Whiting or some prepared cleaning paste may be used on windows—the idea is to let these dry and then wipe off the powder which takes off the grease film leaving the windows bright and clear.

Windows should be cleaned when the sun is not shining on them directly as it causes uneven evaporation of mixture and gives a streaked surface.

If you do laundry the smart way, sudsing a load each day in the washing machine, there will always be clean clothes ready for your family to wear.
