MRS. W. A. NEWELL

Mrs. William A. "Mose" Newell, 86, pioneer kindergarten educator in the U. S. and founder of the Methodist social service in the Southeast died Friday at 4 p. m. at the home of her daughter in Greensboro. Burial services were held at the family cemetery at Boger in Cabarrus County beside her husband, who was formerly pastor of the Tryon Methodist Church, principal of Tryon school and superintendent of Methodist districts.

Mrs. Newell was the former Miss Bertha Payne of Racine, Wis., an aunt of Ralph Erskine, Mrs. Carroll P. Rogers and Mrs. M. Parish-Watson. She first came to Tryon on a visit in 1896, and married to Mr. Newell in Tryon in 1909. She and her husband became leaders in religious and social service work in the various communities in which they lived while he was a Methodist minister, but they always maintained a home in Tryon until a few years ago shortly after the death of Mr. Newell in 1940. Their home is now owned by Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames. They also built the H. L. Fite house and the Mark E. Smith house.

Before coming to Tryon Mrs. Newell was a professor in the University of Chicago. For many years she was superintendent of the Bureau of Christian Social Relations. She advocated the extension of sick and visitation to training in social work, world fellowship and race relations, and was a leader in many other civic affairs on a national scale.

Besides her nieces and nephew in Tryon she is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Robert H. Shepherd of Greensboro and a nephew in Wisconsin.
