

Quotes From Blood Donors

Here are a few of the answers given this reporter's query: "Why do you go to the Blood Bank?"

"I go for purely selfish reasons. The blood bank pays good dividends. I know that if ever I, or any member of my family is in need of blood, in any form, we can get it from the Red Cross, free of cost. That, I consider, a fair exchange."

"I always donate blood from a sense of duty but now I do it out of gratitude. When my little girl came down with a serious case of measles, gamma globulin pulled her through. In donating my blood, I will be helping some other child to recover and that's the best way I know to repay the Red Cross."

"I go to the blood bank because I like to feel that I am helping others. I don't get around much and it's nice to run into old friends there. Besides, I enjoy Mrs. Knight's canteen." — Red Cross Reporter.
