ASKS FOR ASSISTANCE

Washington — Congressman Lamar Gudger announced today that U. S. Postal Service authorities in his 11th Congressional District has asked his office for assistance.

The questionnaires mailed in December to Gudger's constituents are posing problems on return. "As they explain it to me, unless the questionnaires are folded or stapled when they are mailed back to me, they tend to jam the automatic mail processing machinery. This delays not only the questionnaires, but other mail as well."

The Congressman called upon his constituents to cooperate with the Postal Service by sealing the questionnaires with either tape or a staple. "This will ease the burden on postal authorities, and expedite return of the questionnaires, which are an important means of finding out how WNC residents feel about issues facing the Congress," Gudger said.

The same instructions apply to new questionnaires being mailed in January which were already printed and in the process of distribution when the problem was called to the Congressman's attention by postal officials.
