 But in your case these ways seem forgotten.
 ...It's as futile as saving umbilicus lint
 To make a huge bale of cotton!
 TH' CHIEF

"WHAT PRICE NATURE"
 by j.r. pullen

A bird should be free to fly
 And man free to sell and buy
 Good earth;
 But neither bird
 Nor man
 Nor earth itself
 should be abused by the abuse of freedom,

And at the cost of Nature's beauty and what
 She has to offer our children's children.

To alter an eco niche for selfish gain or profit is depriving those future generations of their rightful heritage as Americans; and it may very well harm wildlife and lead to extinction of some animals, which we have come to take for granted. It even can lead to pestilence and ultimately hunger if carried to extreme in some areas. Better to be poorer and breathe clean air amongst natural beauty than to have to buck congested streets while inhaling exhaust or pollution from a company nearby....all the time saving up to go on vacation where there IS clean water, fish, fresh air and nature. Are we right to encroach on Nature in the name of jobs and increased revenue for the county under the concept of Bigger is Better? I don't know the answer...but like Thoreau, I feel that the natural art and beauty of Nature should not give way to the "building of Corinthian Columns." And if those "columns" are built, let them not destroy what God created. Let them not take place and call them man's expression of art or fulfillment of a need for "progress."
