Craft Exhibits At Arts Center

Two wall cases containing varying examples of enamel work and wood carving done by members of Tryon Crafts are presently on exhibit for the month of June in the craft working area on the bottom floor of The Tryon Fine Arts Center.

The enamel pieces have all been done in the classes conducted by Marjorie Lockwood and represent several techniques. The piece is then fired in a small kiln at 1500 degrees F.

Other processes represented in the exhibit are pieces of painted enamel, in which the enamel is applied to a slightly concave copper surface and fired; two pieces of silver jewelry with the colors applied by a so-called wet-pack inlay; and a lovely dish in which the colored pattern is produced with a special tool by a "swirl" process.

The cabinet exhibiting samples of the wood carving class contains several finely detailed, leprechaun-like figures in bass wood, a large eagle in walnut and a number of life-like animal figures — a polar bear, a bear gripping in his teeth a large fish, a bear cub and, among birds, a house wren, a swan, a great blue
