A number of people called us to let us know that they had seen Stanislas Czwertynski of Tryon being interviewed on the CBS news Sunday night as one of the passengers rescued from the burning cruise liner Prinsendam off the Alaskan coast. Albert Johnson of Tryon talked with Mr. Czwertynski and reports that both are fine although they lost everything. Mrs. Czwertynski was rescued by the oil tanker Williamsburgh and was taken to Valdez. Mr. Czwertynski was taken to Sitka. They were to be united in Seattle, Washington and then make the trip home.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Deobald of Tryon were also on the boat and are reported as being safe.

The Prinsendam was left burning 120 miles off the rugged Alaskan coast. All the more than 500 passengers and crew members forced to jump ship early Saturday had been accounted for.
