Fewer Wrinkles

By Jan Christensen, NCSU

Even the best permanent press and synthetic knit garments get a few wrinkles when packed in storage boxes or left in a suitcase or crowded closet for a while.

In most cases, they can be "de-wrinkled" by a good tumbling in the dryer, for about 10 minutes on the permanent press cycle, says Judieth Mock, extension clothing specialist, North Carolina State University.

Some dryers have an "air" setting that can be used for this purpose.

Be sure to remove the garment from the dryer as soon as it stops running to prevent further wrinkling.

that might handle the particular problem (food stamps, fuel, transportation, health, clothing, etc.). However, there are exceptions that cannot be handled through these organizations in time, so FISH tries its best to fill the gap until proper arrangements can be made.

Filling this gap, if requiring transportation with in Polk County or the Landrum area, is easily handled by one of many of our "transportation volunteers". However, if the gap requires a quick purchase of some food or fuel (wood, oil or coal), a second-hand heater or some such necessary items not available by donation, hard cash is required now! A number of people in the community answered our last appeal for financial assistance and we have managed well to date with this help. But, with the ever-rising cost of food and fuel and with colder weather coming on, we need additional help along this line.

All those generous people who enjoy being Good Samaritans through use of FISH to assist needy individuals, please send your contributions as soon as possible to Liz Graeme, FISH Treasurer, Box 39, Route 1, Tryon, N. C. 28782. — Reporter
