Jane Strong In National Ad

Lots of friends of Jane Chapman Strong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Chapman of Tryon have seen a familiar face in a number of magazines and newspapers which carry Southern Company advertising. Jane Strong, Physical Education Instructor, Augusta, Ga. is shown leading a tug of war team and then the advertisement has a single picture of her.

The ad reads: "It takes all kinds of teamwork to keep 9 million Southerners supplied with electricity and nobody's more important to that effort than Jane Strong, a physical education instructor at Glenn Hills High School in Augusta, Ga.

"During the past five years alone, she and thousands of other Southern Company stockholders have invested more than $800 million in the Southern electric system.

At the end of the ad: "Because we can count on people like Jane Strong, nearly nine million people across the Southeast can count on electricity. People. The real power behind electricity."

The ad appears in regional issues of Sports Illustrated, National Geographic, Better Homes & Garden, U. S. News and World Report, Newsweek and Readers Digest.
