

Clearing Creek

Work is about complete on the cleaning and dredging of the creek along East Howard Street. This is part of the Town Community Development Project. Taylor and Murphy Construction Co. of Asheville is the contractor.

Gasoline consumption in the U. S. was down 7 percent last year although the number of miles driven declined only 1 percent. Experts expect the trend to continue, mainly because of more fuel-efficient cars.

Fire Dept. Renovated

The Tryon Volunteer Fire Department has just completed renovating the front and back of the fire department. This included new siding and paint. The new sign was made by Mervin Oakes of Tryon.

Extension Notes

Car pools, vanpools and public transportation may not always offer the cheapest ride to work.

"If consumers' value of time is included in the total cost of travel, then some travel modes which are relatively cheap in monetary terms may be relatively expensive when the value of time in travel is included in the total cost", says Dr. Michael Walden, extension specialist in consumer economics at North Carolina State University.

The reason time used in personal travel is valuable is simply that it could be used for something else. "Instead of spending five hours per week commuting to work the consumer could use this time working or relaxing", Walden says.

In evaluating your travel time, consider the monetary value of an extra hour of work time, if commuting time could be cut by an hour. Would it be worth using a slightly more expensive mode of transportation to have that extra hour free to work?

But perhaps your job has a fixed work schedule and would not allow you to work extra hours. Then you must consider whether you prefer that lower-cost transportation or more leisure time, Walden explains.

Another problem arises when the consumer dislikes his job so much that the extra hours on the job would not be valued more highly than commuting time.

The important thing to remember here is that the cheapest travel mode, in terms of out-of-pocket expenses, may not be the cheapest overall and it pays to evaluate your time needs.
