Interested In A Saturday Seminar?

The School of Humanities and Social Sciences at North Carolina State University is sponsoring seminars on nine different subjects this fall. Co-sponsors are the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service and the National Endowment for the Humanities. The seminars meet for approximately two hours each week for four weeks. The first and fourth sessions are to be conducted by a professor from the School of Humanities. The middle two weeks will be conducted by a local member of the group with videotapes from NCSU.

Topics offered are: North Carolina and the Civil War; North Carolina Folklore; The Portrayal of the Small Town in American Literature; Violence and Capital Punishment; The United States and Russia Today; Religion, Obscenity, Dissent; First Amendment Issues.

If you are interested in attending a Saturday Seminar in Columbus, call the Agricultural Extension office at 894-8218. Time, place and topic will be determined by those interested.

Upstairs Change

The Upstairs Players will not perform "The Mid-Summer Night's Dream" tonight in Saluda. That performance has been rescheduled for Tuesday, Aug. 18th at 7 p.m.
