Weather Thursday: high 78, low 42, humidity 45%. Friday was another beautiful day.

President Reagan asked Congress on Thursday night to cut spending an additional $13 billion next year and to raise $3 billion more in taxes to lift the nation from its "economic swamp" and point the budget toward balance in 1984.

Rising housing costs moderated in August but still pushed inflation to a 10.6 percent annual rate, the government reported Thursday.

About 10,500 North Carolina families will lose their food stamp benefits under new food stamp rules that go into effect Oct. 1. Another 70,000 families will experience a reduction in benefits.

Small World

Mrs. Jack Rhodes (Melinda Hilton) of Milwaukee, Wisconsin was reading the Mikwaukee paper and found a connection with her former home town, Tryon. The Milwaukee Journal Garden Editor was telling about a new herb handbook, "Boerner Botanical Gardens' Herb Information Handbook." The handbook names and describes 320 aromatic herbs, lists their uses and tells how to grow them.

The Boerner handbook was compiled by Ruth D. Wrensch, formerly of Brookfield, Wis., and now of Tryon.

"A dedicated herb gardener and a long-time member of The Herb Society of America, Wrensch developed the book with the aid of William J. Radler, Boerner's assistant director, and George Stepke, the gardener who maintains the 12 planting beds in Whitnall Park's widely renowned herb garden."
