Knicks Give Wingo A Tryout

Robert T. Burnett of Old Greenwich, Conn. dropped us a line and enclosed a clipping from the Friday, Oct 2nd New York Times which stated that the New York Knicks were giving 33 year old Harthorne Wingo a try-out. The 6-foot-8 inch forward has played the last five years in Italy and Switzerland.

In the championship year of 1973 Madison Square Gardens fans would chant "Win-Go, Win-Go" urging Coach Red Holzman to send him into the game. Wingo remained with the Knicks two more seasons, before he left to play in Italy in 1976.

(Editor's Note: Harthorne played three years at Embury high the Negro school at that time) and one year at Tryon High in the first year of integration. Tryon High won the Foothill Conference Championship in 1964 and he was named "Most Valuable."

How he made NBA is an Horatio Alger tale. He had 1 year at Friendship College in Rock Hill, S. C. and then went to New York and got a job with the Harlem Wizards. From the Wizards he moved on to the Allentown Jets of the Eastern Basketball League where he was named the Most Valuable Player in 1972, earning him a shot with the Knicks.)

Mrs. Mark A. Pollock has returned to her home in Tryon after four months in Europe.
